*Please note: Students who have completed the first half of their sophomore year are encouraged to take PSYC 1300 – Learning Frameworks during the second half of their sophomore year. This course is a three-hour college academic elective and now required for all new students. Students who are beyond the latter half of their sophomore year will still need to take this course first, or along with other courses.

The only difference in taking PSYC 1300 is that no placement testing is required if the student is still completing sophomore work. A homeschooled student may take the COMPASS placement test to determine readiness for other college level work and begin dual credit courses promptly upon completion of their sophomore year.
